ABOUT THE AUTHORS

John Campling

John Campling, BA (Hons), MA, MIR, PhD (Cambridge) is associate professor in management in the Faculty of Law, Business and the Creative Arts at James Cook University's Cairns Campus. His current research focuses mainly on industrial clusters, networks and virtual organisations in the nanotechnology, biotechnology and new media industries in Europe and the Asia-Pacific region. Other areas of study include the design and management of organisations with sustainable environmental, economic, social and cultural strategies; comparative international human resource management systems; and creative technology and innovation management. John has published extensively on human resources and employee relations management, and organisational strategy and structure, in major international journals such as the British Journal of Industrial Relations, the International Journal of Comparative Labour Law and Industrial Relations, and the Journal of Management Studies. In addition, he co-authored a major research-based book on non-union employee relations — Bargained Out: Negotiating Without Unions in Australia. He has researched and lectured on a broad range of strategic management, innovation and technology management, human resource management and employee relations, and organisational change topics in Australia, the United Kingdom, Hong Kong, North America, Singapore and Vietnam. He also has extensive consulting experience in human resource management and employee relations with the federal and state governments in Australia, and in socio-economic impact analysis in Papua New Guinea. He served as the Director of James Cook University's domestic and international MBA programs for over six years and has advised numerous biotechnology and creative industry firms on business strategy and innovation management issues.

David Poole

David Poole, BBus, MBA, MEdAdmin, PhD, is NSW and national Executive Director of the Urban Development Institute of Australia, a major professional association that represents the interests of developers and builders. He was senior lecturer in management within the School of Management at the University of Western Sydney before deciding to put his teaching and research into practice by accepting a position in the private sector. His research interests include public sector management, university management, organisational behaviour and business strategy. David's research has been published in journals such as Management Today, Leading and Managing, Higher Education and the International Journal of Public Sector Management. During 2001, he served as Visiting Professor of Management at Utah State University. David has also taught in the MBA programs of the Macquarie Graduate School of Management (MGSM), Australian Graduate School of Management (AGSM) and Sydney Graduate School of Management (SGSM). He continues to publish in management fields and serve as a teaching adjunct on several MBA programs.

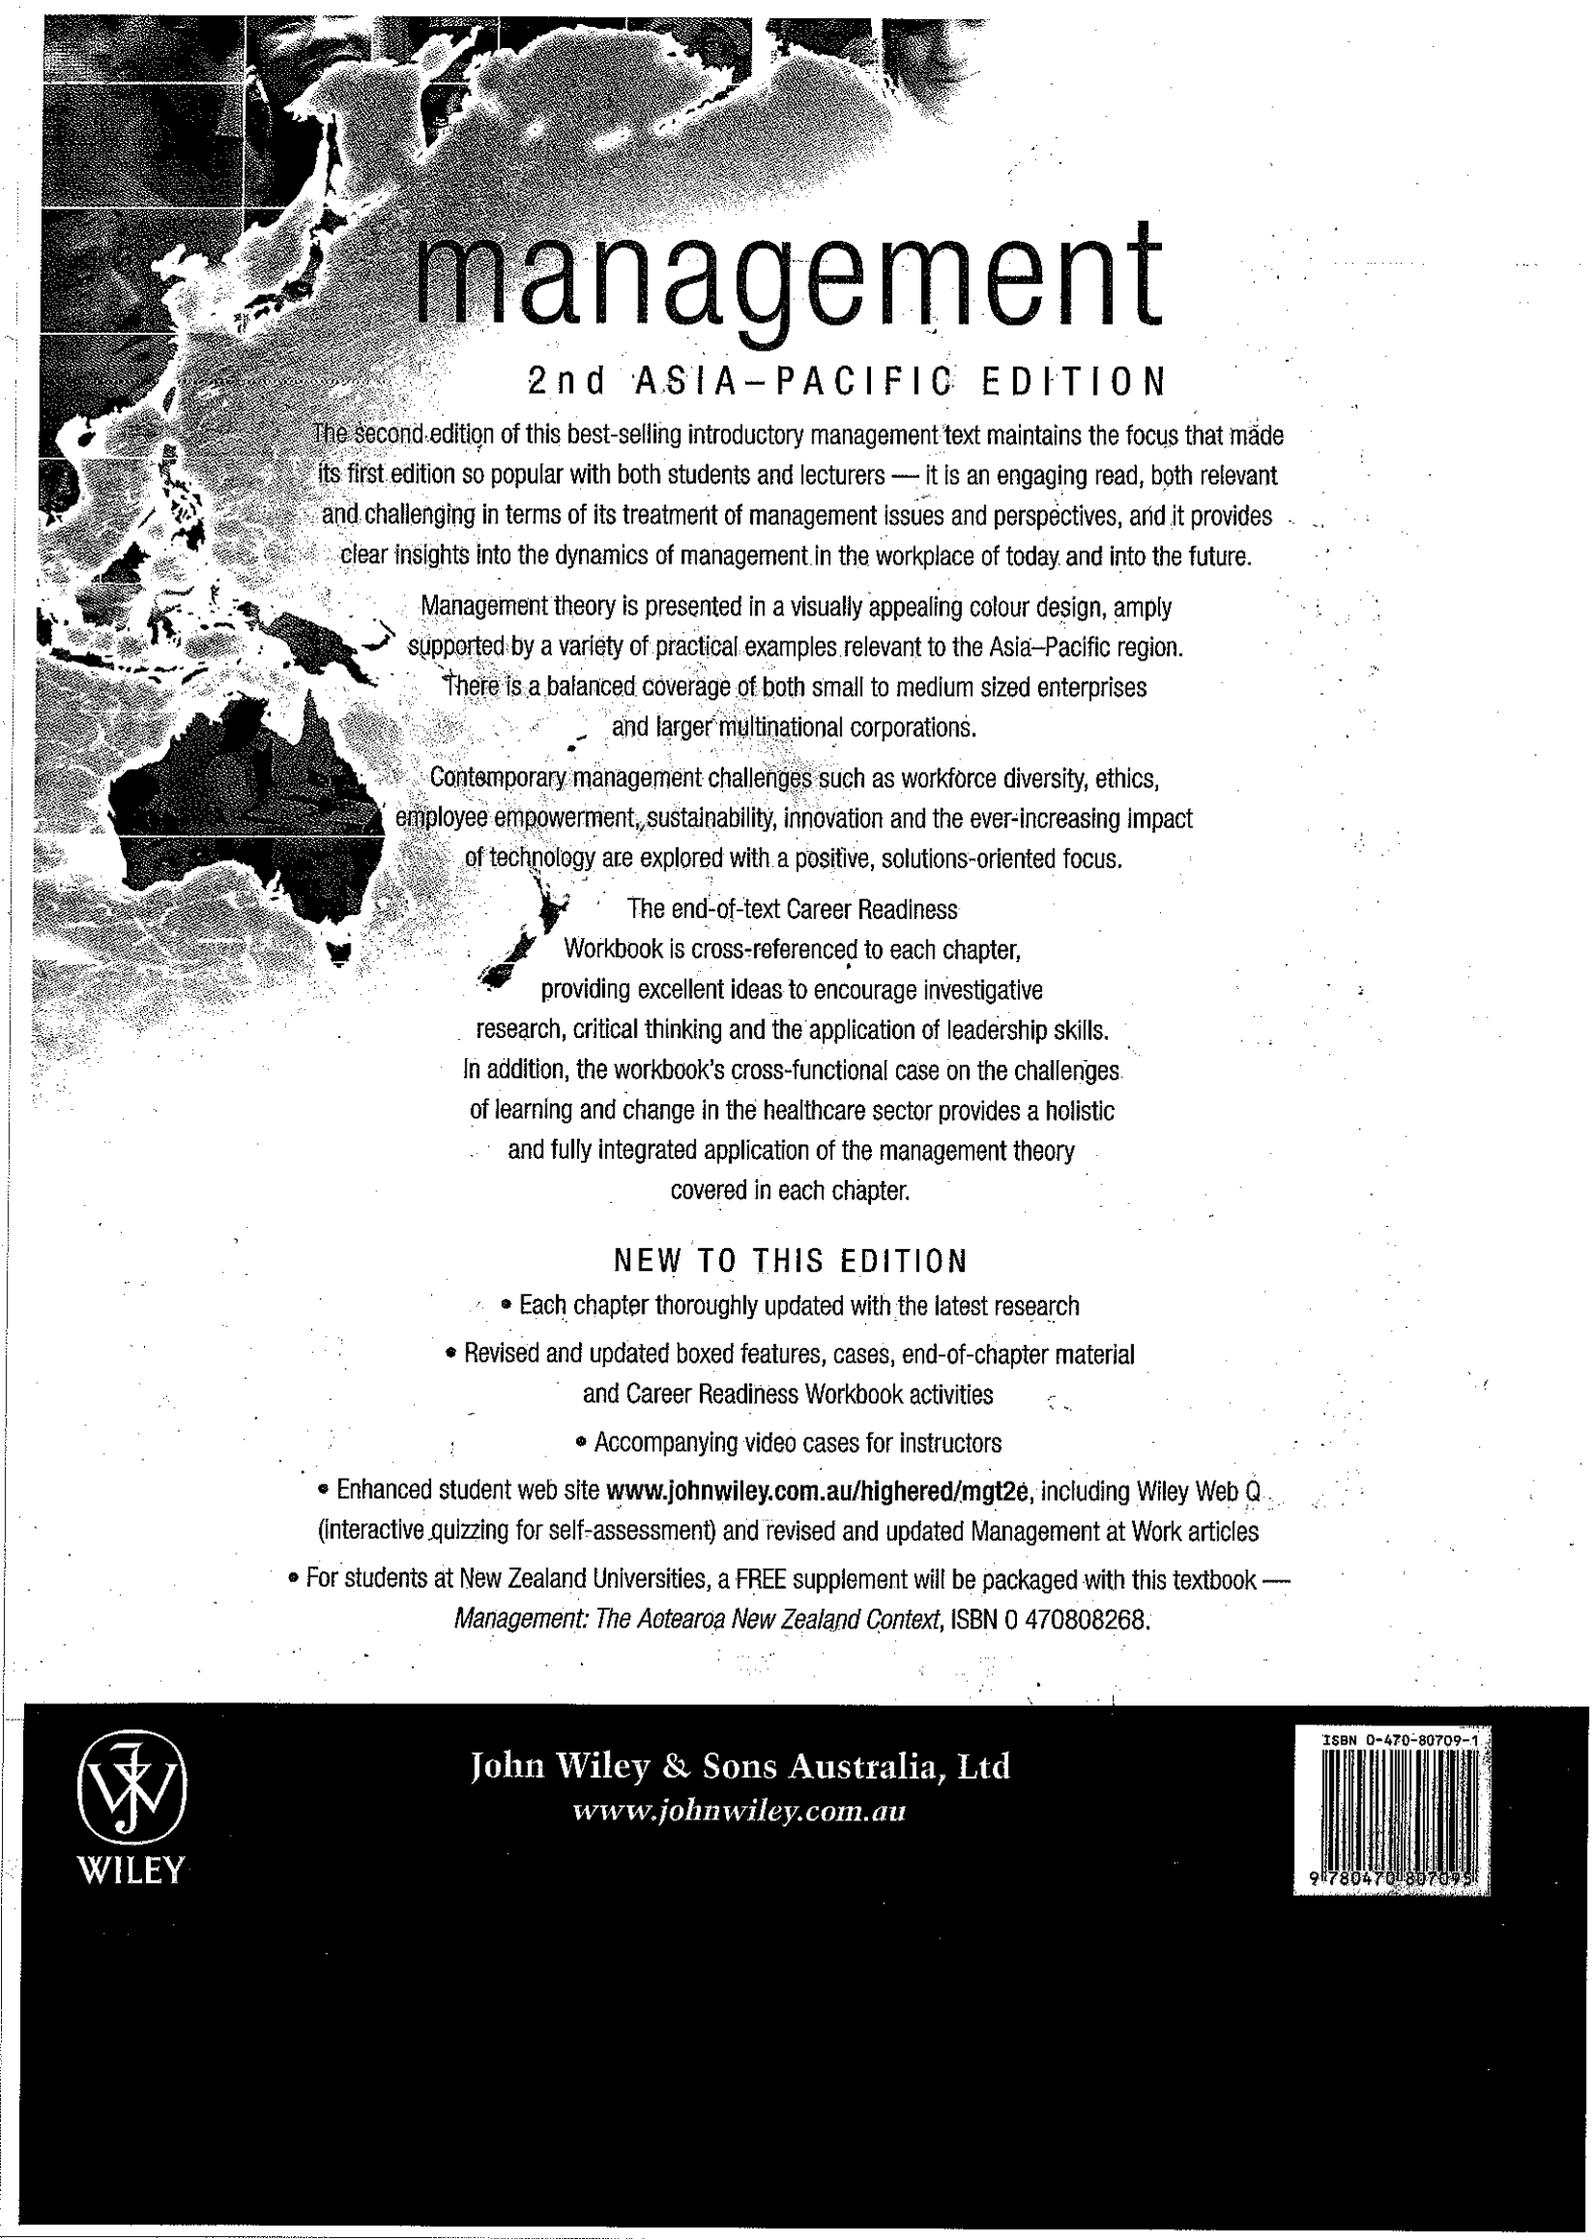

Retha Wiesner

Dr Retha Wiesner is currently associate professor in the Faculty of Business at the University of Southern Queensland. Before entering academia in 1989, she gained extensive management and organisational behaviour experience as a human resource manager and industrial psychologist. Her current research interests include a major national and international study on employee management practices and organisational change in small and medium-sized enterprises, and a large international study on downsizing and restructuring.

Retha has published numerous articles and book chapters on organisational change, employee management practices and organisational restructuring in Australia and overseas. She has taught management and organisational behaviour courses in Australia and overseas, and is still actively involved as a management consultant in Australian organisations www.mgifutures.com.

John R. Schermerhorn Jr

John Schermerhorn Jr, PhD, MBA (distinction), BS, is the Charles G. O'Bleness Professor of Management in the College of Business at Ohio University, where he teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in management. He is committed to instructional excellence and curriculum innovation, and is working extensively with technology utilisation in the classroom. A dedicated scholar, John is a member of the Academy of Management, and has published numerous articles in the Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Academy of Management Executive, Organizational Dynamics, Asia-Pacific Journal of Management, and the Journal of Management Development, among others. He is the author of the US edition of this textbook, and senior co-author of Managing Organizational Behaviour, 8th edition, and Core Concepts of Organizational Behaviour, also published by John Wiley & Sons.

2nd ASIA-PACIFIC EDITION

The second edition of this best-selling introductory management text maintains the focus that made its first edition so popular with both students and lecturers — it is an engaging read, both relevant and challenging in terms of its treatment of management issues and perspectives, and it provides clear insights into the dynamics of management in the workplace of today and into the future.

Management theory is presented in a visually appealing colour design, amply supported by a variety of practical examples relevant to the Asia-Pacific region.

There is a balanced coverage of both small to medium sized enterprises and larger multinational corporations.

Contemporary management challenges such as workforce diversity, ethics, employee empowerment, sustainability, innovation and the ever-increasing impact of technology are explored with a positive, solutions-oriented focus.

The end-of-text Career Readiness

Workbook is cross-referenced to each chapter, providing excellent ideas to encourage investigative research, critical thinking and the application of leadership skills.

In addition, the workbook's cross-functional case on the challenges of learning and change in the healthcare sector provides a holistic and fully integrated application of the management theory covered in each chapter.
